HE FOLLOWED THE TRAIL
BLAZED BY DANIEL BOONE

AND CAME TO MISSOURI WHICH WAS HIS HOME THE REMAINDER OF HIS LIFE

WAS A SOUTHERNER
OF THE OLD SCHOOL

An Old Friend Pays a Glowing Tribute to the Memory of James A. Porter Who For a Number of Years Was a Business Man of This City and Whose Death at His Platteburg Home Is Most Deeply Deplored by a Vast Concourse of Friends Whom He Had Made.

"James A. Porter, deceased—Dear Uncle Jim was the son of Samuel A. Porter and Mary Beckham Porter, who settled in Clay County, Missouri, about the year 1846.

"Samuel was reared in an old Virginia home, known as Fruit Hill, situated on Rapidan River, in Culpeper county.

"His ancestors were Revolutionary stock and settled in Virginia in 1660.

"Daniel Boone once lived in Culpeper county, and it is reasonable to suspect that Samuel was familiar with Boone's exploits in Kentucky, for when he left Virginia he followed Boone's trail overland to the West.

This was the Wilderness trail to and through Kentucky. This trail is to be made a National Trail soon, hard surfaced.

"It took many wagons to transport all his possessions. He had seven children and thirty-five or forty slaves. All had to be fed and cared for. They had many ox teams, and travel was slow. My mother, Uncle Jim's sister, told me many times of their experiences on this trip. She was then thirteen years of age, and Uncle Jim was eleven. They played and romped together most of the time. In later years when my mother was hard pressed, he was generous and mindful of her—also her children.

It was Boone's Trail

"My mother told me that the Wilderness Trail was Boone's Trail. Coming through Virginia they passed by and camped at Natural Bridge. She has described the wondrous beauty of Cumberland Gap-pass. On reaching Kentucky they saw the same beautiful sight that greeted and enraptured Boone when he entered Kentucky.

The grandeur of the hills, and the great solitude of the valleys, covered with the natural bluegrass, that has since defendant abandoned plaintiff on the 28th day of November, 1914, defendant has repeatedly written to plaintiff that he no longer had any affection or regard for her and that he did love another woman and warning plaintiff that he would never again live with her as her husband; and that said defendant be further notified that unless he, the said Roy E. Severns, shall be and appear at the next term of this court to be held at the court house in the City of St. Joseph, in the said County of Buchanan and State of Missouri, on the 1st day of May, 1922, or on or before the 3rd day of said term, to answer plaintiff's petition, said petition will be taken for confessed as to him, said defendant, and judgment rendered against him accordingly.

It is further ordered that a copy of this order be published at least once a week in The St. Joseph Observer, a newspaper published in the said County of Buchanan, for four weeks successively, the last portion of which to be at least fifteen days before the commencement of said May term, 1922, of this court.

made Kentucky famous, and her horses, strong limbed, greeted their eyes. This was encouragement for them to journey on, where they hoped to find a location just as promising.

"Even in 1846 all the choice parts of Kentucky were taken. In those days land companies in the East were made large grants of land for settlement, and unless one stood in pretty well with the promoters, he would not fare very well as to location. So they kept on traveling until they reached Missouri. They had few arms, and game was abundant, so living was no great hardship.

"They settled in Clay county, near Kearney. They chose a spot not unlike the place they had left in Virginia; red clay hills, and bottom land on a stream, with plenty of timber to clear. They had plenty of work to do, clearing and getting the soil ready to till.

"Grandfather fared abundantly until the Civil war, at which time he lost his slaves and about all his possessions outside his land.

A Brave Confederate Soldier

"Uncle Jim was a Confederate soldier, losing a leg in the war. It is said of him that he displayed wonderful nerve on the operating table, even swearing at the doctors. This is something that always amazed me, for not once in the great number of years that I knew him did I ever hear him use profane language, and to me he was the personification of goodness, and always to be respected.

"On being mustered out he returned to Clay county, married Bettie Gill, and almost immediately after the war engaged in the dry goods business, first at Holt, then Lathrop. He also had stores in Clay Center, Kas., Cameron, Platteburg, Carthage and St. Joseph, Mo. He went through panics galore in those days, but he kept going when others failed. No one can measure the courage and dominating will that was ever present in that frail body. If he had been more fortunate in the locations of his ventures there is no doubt in my mind but that he would have been a financial wonder, and money in his possession would have been used at all times for not only his own happiness, but for those he loved.

Sam Jones story

"Platteburg in those days was spring mad. Medicinal water had been found just outside the village limits. The camp meetings with Sam Jones as revivalist in those days a drawing card, so one needed good steeds to keep up with the diversities of those times. Uncle Jim entertained Sam Jones on his trip to Platteburg. At the table there was the liveliest kind of talk. I can remember on one occasion a story that Sam Jones told which was so lively that it caused Kay, James Gordon and I to laugh so heartily that we were gently removed to a woodshed and kept there, to later dine at the second table.

"The last time I saw Uncle Jim was last summer. I had an intense feeling that I should look him up and go to see him if only for a little while. So one bright summer day I quietly rode into Platteburg. Drove right to Sam's door and called for Uncle Jim. Sam took me to the yard. There sat Uncle Jim in his rocking chair, dozing away the time. I was wonderfully paid for those few moments. He again revived those inspiring thoughts in my mind as he did in his younger days.

"His life has been an inspiration not only for me, but for a number of young men who left his employ to battle with the world. Not one of them have I heard of as being a failure." J. L. G. Dykes.—Clinton County Democrat.

KEEP AT IT BOYS

The Farmers Will Profit From the War Between Ford and McCormick.

The Hague tribunal is perforce neglecting its duty—ostensibly—for it as well as the League of Nations and all organizations that pertain to peace, have taken no cognizance of a billion dollar war that is now raging. It is the war between the princes of the tractor industry, Mr. Ford and Mr. McCormick.

We call it the Billion Dollar War because the combined resources of the International Harvester company and the Ford interests must easily reach that large round figure.

General Ford was the aggressor. He crossed the frontier two weeks ago, cutting the price of his tractors from $625 to $395. Last week the Harvester company reduced the price of its tractors $230 and offered to throw in, free, a three furrow plow or a tractor disk harrow with each purchase.

Mr. Ford says his aim is to sell a million tractors a year. Harold McCormick, who has put grand opera aside for the time being and is singing the song of business, tells his staff that the Harvester company must outsell Ford.

Consider the dazed farmer. He stops sorting seed corn and watches the battle of the giants. Every gun fired shoots money into his pocket. He will not attempt to arbitrate. He will pick the tractor which suits his needs and his purse.

A war like this may be hard on the treasury of a Ford or a McCormick, but it is a good thing for the country. Reduced prices mean bigger sales. Bigger sales mean busy factories and fewer unemployed. The money comes from the farmer, and, after passing through two or three hands, goes back to him. Tractors solve the farmhand problem. Tractors result in diversified crops. Tractors mean a bigger production of food and more to eat for everybody at lower prices. The increased use of tractors stimulates the iron and oil business.

If Mr. Ford and Mr. McCormick can stand the war, who shall deprive them of their pleasure?

The British Trying Hard to Use a Tarred Stick Without Smearing Their Hands.

How they may take hold of pitch and not have their hands smeared, is what is causing the cold sweat that has broken out among the English brethren of the mill and loom. Wanting the Russian trade, hungering for it mightily, they do not want Lenin in London rambling about and stirring up the English reds.

Seams and cracks are opening in the old British empire. The markets of used to be are going. With a marvellous political skill the British overlords, men of the old Norman and Celtic strains, are holding the outlines of a changing world domain in place.
